Nestled next to the Wilson red line stop, Harry S Truman College is the perfect starting line for students who have a calling in education or child development as City Colleges’ Center of Excellence for Education, Human and Natural Sciences. The college is an official Chicago Makerspace, complete with a Tinkering Lab and a Child Development Program that is accredited by the National Association for the Education of Young Children (NAEYC). Truman also offers unique credentials in automotive technology, human development and family services, and cosmetology, and even has a full-service, student-run salon on campus.

For students looking to earn a bachelor’s degree, Truman College offers a wide range of associate degree programs. You can save thousands of dollars by earning your associate degree here, then transferring on to a four-year college or university.
